What was the session about?

The topic of today's session was knowledge. Dr. Harjinder has introduced several key philosophical and linguistic principles that make one aware of the world's knowledge knots. He discussed how one's common sense is inextricably linked to the society/environment in which they live, as well as the beliefs they have. General knowledge nowadays is getting less talked subject in today's Generation. But it is a big and deep subject to dive in and love the world's unexplored things.

What I liked about the session:

I gained and liked from the session was more. The talk really helped with overestimating or thinking little of the things we know and their convictions which eventually brings about some light on the individual. Sir provided excellent instances and subjects for discussion. I discovered that uncertainty on the other individual's aim is a significant justification issue in learning General knowledge and we should place ourself in the world of knowledge and hope for some resolution. I loved how all these examples show how knowledge and common sense are not limited and can be anything.

What I did not like about the session:

The one thing that I did not like was how Sir had debated the existence of God. I feel like we did not really go into the meat of the matter, such as how did knowledge diversify in this way.

My takeaways from the session:

We should try on our part to get connected with the society and knowing about the unexplored possibilities as in as an individual.
